THE THREE QUAYS

Running along the length of Singapore River is the convivial trio of Boat Quay, Clarke Quay and Robertson Quay. The warehouses and shophouses of old have been conserved and turned into all manner of cafes, bars and restaurants as well as arts spaces. At Clarke Quay in particular, the night is always young and the clubs are always buzzing.

The 14 Bridges of Singapore River

Every bridge tells a story of Singapore's past.

Find them all: Kim Seng Bridge

- Jiak Kim Bridge • Robertson Bridge
- Pulau Saigon Bridge • Alkaff Bridge
- Clemenceau Bridge • Ord Bridge • Read Bridge • Coleman Bridge • Elgin Bridge
- Cavenagh Bridge • Anderson Bridge
- Esplanade Bridge • Jubilee Bridge

Clarke Quay Merriment

Eat, drink and party the night away. From Irish pubs to Japanese izakayas, juicy steaks to messy chilli crabs, the dazzling dining selections ensure there is something for everyone.

KC Arts Centre

Home of Singapore Repertory Theatre, catch theatre performances from this leading theatre company whose original works include Forbidden City: Portrait of an Empress. Not forgetting the younger audience, shows like The Cat in the Hat make the perfect introduction to theatre.

River Cruise

For over a century, bumboats have been plying the Singapore River. Why not hop on board one to see the city skyline from a new perspective while learning about the history of the river and the landmarks lining its banks?

Extreme Rides

If you're itching to get that adrenaline pumping, there's no need to travel to some far-flung amusement park. Literally steps from home, scream your heart out on the GX-5 Extreme Swing or the equally thrilling Slingshot.

Printmaking at STPI

Formerly known as Singapore Tyler Print Institute, STPI is a creative workshop as well as a contemporary art gallery. Sign up for a guided tour when exhibitions are ongoing. There are also hands-on workshops where you can learn various types of printmaking.

CHARMING TIONG BAHRU

Built in the 1930s, Tiong Bahru is one of Singapore's oldest housing estates and one of the hippest too. Home to distinctive architecture, quaint shops and cool eateries, its easy, eclectic vibe is well-loved by all.

Art Deco Architecture

Stroll along Tiong Poh Road and spot the Streamline Moderne blocks, featuring curves reminiscent of cars and planes from the 30s. On Lim Liak Street, see how the International Style flats there have been adapted to the tropics with five-foot ways and airwells.

Cheng's @ 27

This family-run Hainanese eatery serves up soul food lovingly perfected over three generations. The pig trotter bee hoon is worth every calorie and so is the gula melaka chiffon cake. Don't forget to take home a jar of their kaya, made fresh daily.

Tiong Bahru Market

On the lower floor is a wet market selling fresh produce, meats and all the ingredients you need to cook up a storm. Or head upstairs to fill your tummy right away at the hawker centre. Let the long queues lead you to the most popular stalls, but the chwee kueh is a must.

Tiong Bahru Bakery

What started as a humble bakery in Tiong Bahru has now become a familiar name with its 7 outlets islandwide. If you're spoilt for choice among the selection of handmade viennoiseries, go for the kouign amann — buttery, flaky and impossibly delicious.

Murals of Old Singapore

From roadside hawkers and fortune tellers to bird singing clubs and inside the home, glimpse a bygone era through these lovely paintings found all over the estate. Take your time to drink in the details for you'll be richly rewarded.

Nana & Bird

Up your style quotient with chic picks ranging from women's fashion and accessories, to home décor and an adorable kids' collection. Besides their own label, they also carry a tightly curated selection from other like-minded brands.

CHINATOWN HERITAGE ENCLAVE

Raffles himself planned for this enclave to accommodate the many Chinese immigrants who flocked to this new land to make their fortune. Maintaining its identity even today, steep yourself in Chinese culture as you explore the historical streets.

牛车水 Ox Cart Water

Otherwise known as Kreta Ayer, this area is the heart of Chinatown. Where ox carts once carried water, the streets are now filled with those who come to admire the conserved shophouses occupied by the traditional (clans, medical halls) as well as the modern (cafes, clubs).

Singapore Musical Box Museum

Located beside the historic Thian Hock Keng, you can kill two birds with one stone here. Admire the fascinating collection of antique musical boxes before heading next door to the temple which has received an honourable mention in the UNESCO Heritage Awards.

Tong Heng

Tong Heng has captured the hearts and bellies of locals for close to a century with their signature egg tarts. With their flaky crust and luscious wobbly custard, there's no stopping at one! Savour other traditional Cantonese classics such as 'Wife' pastry, walnut cookie and more.

Chinatown Complex Food Centre

Gone are the days when hawkers peddled their food by the roadside, but their legacy lives on here. Savour a trove of traditional dishes from over 200 stalls like claypot rice, steamed fish head and the ever-popular soya sauce chicken.

Chinatown Street Art

Have fun hunting down the many murals dotting the area. Discover scenes from the past such as Chinese opera, lion dance costume makers, samsui women and more. Inexplicably, there's also one of Bruce Lee holding a durian...

Tea Appreciation at Tea Chapter

Take a break from all that walking and sign yourself up for a lesson in tranquillity. Beyond tastings, delve into the world of tea with a choice of sessions that offer a deep dive or a leisurely introduction to Chinese tea culture.

ASEAN Sculpture Garden
As a show of unity and cooperation, sculptors from the ASEAN countries of Philippines, Thailand, Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore worked together to produce this stunning collection of five 5-metre tall artworks. Brunei added the sixth when it joined later.

National Museum of Singapore
Dating back to 1887, the museum is the nation's oldest and an architectural icon too. Far from a staid affair, go on an immersive journey as you discover fresh perspectives of the Singapore story. Their Night Festival is a magical experience and a highlight on the arts calendar.

National Gallery Singapore
Explore the world's largest public collection of Singapore and Southeast Asian modern art. As if that's not reason enough to spend a day here, the gallery is housed within City Hall and the former Supreme Court, two beautifully restored national monuments.

ArtScience Museum
With a mission to bring art, science, culture and technology together, you can look forward to exhibitions exploring diverse interesting topics. Meant to symbolise the welcoming hand of Singapore, its architecture is equally hard to miss.

Esplanade
You can clearly see how this arts venue got its nickname "The Durian". Presenting more than 3,000 performances yearly, those who love dance, music and theatre are in for a treat.

Haji Lane
For street art that's off the beaten path, head to this lane and its surrounding areas adorned with head-turning kaleidoscopic murals by local and international artists.
